

Poetry Series

Bakary S. Sonko
- poems -

Publication Date:
2016

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Bakary S. Sonko()

Am In Love

It has hit me on the most unsuspecting of time
I have drastically falling in love
I wake up and in a hast to see her
Her smiles turns me of
And my hearts sang in joy like a dolphin
When I see her walking towards me

I wish I could tell her how much she meant to me
I wish she could realized that I so much love
I wish she could give me chance
Then I will show her she meant a world to me
She is my princess, my love
My heart, my soul
I wish she could give me chance

Bakary S. Sonko

Boko Haram

Your name echo fear
From the east to the west
People tremble to the sound of your name

Your barbaric act
Rapes and murders
I wonder what your principles are
Because you are definitely off the track

The religion that you claim to follow
Has no place for your barbaric act
Killing innocent people
Raping and kidnapping women

Are not the ideologue our religion teach
But our God shall give you the punishment you deserve
For tarnishing the image of our religion
Then we shall say Allah wins

Bakary S. Sonko

Enough

Enough with your torment
Torturing me days and night
Your words are like a sharp needle
It pieces in to my heart
And render my brain useless
As the only thought in my mind
Is your torment

Enough with your sarcasms
Castigating with no purpose
Laying traps with no reason
My downfall your joy
Looking for my mistake to attack
Never tried to correct me
My wrongs are you content
Any lope holes you pounce

Enough with the hatred
Abhorring for no reason
Assassinating my character
Wishing me evil
Enough with it
Let love take control
Your heart will be at peace
Your soul shall have a rest

Bakary S. Sonko

I Wish I Could

Oh god
I wish I could
Aid the weak
Father the orphan
Brother the sick
Befriend the harry

I wish I got powers
Powers of enchanted
Then I would create a world
An impeccable world

A world that shall not know violence
Were non would ever feel the pain
Of hunger and thirsty
Were joy and laughter
Would be the melodies

I wish I could gain control
To rheostat people's heart
Filled it with love
Get rid of hate and scorn
Propagate forbearance
And advocate for peace.

Bakary S. Sonko

Motherless Child

As I sat watching them eat
Tears plummeting out of my eyes
Running down on my chins
With little energy to wipe it dry

As hunger is about to slain me
How I wish my parents were alive
Working on the field
The sun rouses on my forehead

And setting splashing on my back
Covered in mud
Stinking on my underwear
My palm as hard as a nut

My face swollen by the bites of the flies
Yet I chose not to complain
For I am an orphan
My crime is the death of my parents

Bakary S. Sonko

My Dad

Growing up I have always spectacle
If gods are not incarnate in men
Now I just realized it did
For you are one such man

Your words are of wisdom
Your friendship a guidance
So caring and present
Show us how to love and share

Performing the role of a mother
Hunger has never be present in our home
Your present fills our belly with laughter and joy
Your gentle touch heals a wound
Yet a man of principle
Who wants the best of all
He is best of all
My dad my hero.

Bakary S. Sonko

My Little Pet

Waking up to your little sneer
As the sun squint through the window
I marvel why it took me so long
To grasped that you are
So endearing and loving Kindhearted and charming
Cutie and innocent
I wonder what my life would be Without your love
Without your esprit de corps
Without your thought
My little pet
My world
My life.

Bakary S. Sonko

My Little Sister

musu my angel
Smiling gorgeously like the morning star
Busing around like a bee
My little amigo

Charming like the midnight moon
Eyes shining like a morning sun
To the world you are one
To me you are the world

Supposed little
But a realism in her exploit
Very much affable
Kindhearted and trustful

My sister
My friend
She is an angel
My little angel.

Bakary S. Sonko

Sunshine

The birds flying high
Singing songs of melody
The sun shining brightly
Reflecting the true nature

Sunshine's seating ablaze
Showing the beauty of nature
Aiding man's vision
Aggrandizing plants self-attainment

Basking under the sun
Reflecting on the days chaos
Not knowing what tomorrow will bring Connecting to Mother Nature

The true beauty of sunshine
Is in its rosining from the east
And it's setting on the west
Its vision incomparable.

Bakary S. Sonko

The Girl Child

I the girl child
Was it my doing innate a girl?
I am even better in all I do
When given a chance

Why the stigma and discrimination?
From the cradle to the mantle
Every child regardless of gender is born to opportunity

Educated me the world shall prosper
Retired me to the four corners of the house
The world's growth shall be retarded
I deserved equally.

Bakary S. Sonko

War

How long shall we remain in wars catacomb?
How long shall we remain enslave?
But the seed continue to grow in our mind
Body and soul

A catastrophe cause by evil mind
Using deadly stick
Which turns man
Into rags of bleeding flesh

Oh war how much destruction you shall bring
You turn a mother childless and a child to orphans
Making them child soldiers
Hunting man like a beast.

Bakary S. Sonko