

Poetry Series

emily corbin
- poems -

Publication Date:
2010

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

emily corbin()

Fellow Enemies

I always thought that life had no meaning
That I was born to be here and then to die
I almost took my life that day
The one where I almost threw everything away
No one was there to help me through the pain
I sat there and dealt with it day after sorrowful day
You are here because of the death of your cat
I'm here because no one cares enough to know where I'm at
If only I had as many friends as I have enemies
I call to you all and tell you once
I'm done with this crusade
There isn't anyone in the world who thinks about me
And if they do it's a shame
I don't think of them because they aren't worth my time
Just leave me alone and let me cry

emily corbin

In The End

They are always here for you when you don't need their help
You must deal with the cards you've been dealt
You say you hate it?
You say death is better than this...this torture?
You have no idea
In the end we all die
No one even loves you even to shine a light on you Hate is all that this world has to offer
If it's nothing but sorrowful hate
Let me join you
We can die together

emily corbin

My Love

My love for you is so strong it could fight a hurricane

My love for you is so confident it could strut like a champ

My love for you is so caring I could never let you go

My love for you is so demanding it hurts to be away from you

But...

My love for you is so scary, I'm afraid I might chase you away

emily corbin