

Poetry Series

Gavin Cassens
- poems -

Publication Date:
2006

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Gavin Cassens(August 16th,1968)

Just a novice poet. All from the heart.

Breathing Indigo

Love hither up the spiral and the bell sustains it's silence impressions on stone mark me well left the flat land an hour ago to have a smoke and get some sleep walking with you while breathing indigo wakes me inward and windows seep painted shut over thirty years five in one and ten in a dime finally open and shifting the chime halfway over yet just beginning twice as fast as we watch the middle living slow in full vertigo I know what love is two how far can distance travel four and then five, maybe more respite and release internal core

Gavin Cassens

Could Have Been

Can't remember the color of your eyes I'd let go if I ever had the time you disengaged without even looking now tell me what color are mine hearts can never be broken by a man with no devotion you don't know that I've become everything you've never won

I am your positive as you oppose fight the fight to becoming a man success is mine where you have failed fatherhood in tact as I upheld children grow with whom they're given children grow regardless of position innocence loves within and no doubt the father, mine, will not be without blue and brown as I see in theirs they will never forget the time we share reflects in my eyes, love, truth, yang & yin I am the father you could have been

Gavin Cassens

Disassembled And In Place fighting happiness with all your might battling & boxing imperfections of the trite wrestling love ideas to the old sod the waves over reaching our esplanade tricky, tricky, tricky with all these lights give it away until you are full tricky, tricky, tricky with all these heights give me away, don't push, don't pull it should be easy, so easy I won't forget where it hurts all the right pieces are disassembled and in place a coalition of the willing should reflect my face rickety, rickety, rickety with a devilish grin that fucking door is open again rickety, rickety, rickety left thinking bane tribulations of a whispering campaign keep on asking and giving it power you cannot deny what you have not discovered disbelief in gravity doesn't make you wrong truth reveals as notes fall in the song as I pull away just to get closer still plenty of mine left unspent time, love and devotion always did travel in harmonic motion

Gavin Cassens

Sleep Walk

I crawl in next to you warm, love, touch, sleep freely, you are my everything content as I nuzzle dream... silence

you crawl in next to me radiant from behind, warms my mind two as one, peace unfolds layers of us as emotions rest waking to discover unconditional dreams of lovers while conscious flows as life's needings you need to know for you, my heart is forever bleeding

(November 14th,2006)

Gavin Cassens