

Poetry Series

Jennifer Klaudi
- poems -

Publication Date:

2011

Publisher:

Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Jennifer Klaudi()

God?

I tend to always hide my feelings and just look up at the ceiling. Everything starts to get more bottled up inside. My heart and mind are ready to explode, i cant help but cry. Sometimes i wish i could disappear. It all wont go away, especially the fears. Everything is haunting me, i feel like im going insane. God, do you this this is a game? Everyone says things get better, Does it god? cause this pain feels like its been here forever. My life has been built on drugs and alcohol, to drain all my pain and fears away. I dont want to go through this anymore. Did i deserve this? God, what did i do? Im going to fight this, the thing i call hell. Soon enough it will ring a bell. I just want to smile again. Ad after all this is over, I know i can. I will try to be as strong as i can be, to show everybody whats underneath, to show them the real me.

Jennifer Klaudi

Pain

It's time to let all my pain and sorrow disappear. Let all my fears blow away. The pain from today and the pain from yesterday. I always wondered why it couldn't have been me. I feel so helpless and worthless, wondering why you had to go. Wishing you were here so we could fight this. Just to give you one last kiss, to let all the memories shine because the good die young. I never thought that I would have to live without you so soon but now I do. To think that at 17 I'd have to go through this alone. You left me in this cold-hearted world with no where to go. I feel like I'm going crazy. Day by day, it keeps getting hazier. You promised me you'd be here forever but you lied, and now you're up in heaven looking down. While all the memories are yet to be found. I'll never forget you, you're the one that made me who I am today, you're the mom, the mom that I never had.

Jennifer Klaudi