

Poetry Series

Jixin Gao
- poems -

Publication Date:

2019

Publisher:

Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Jixin Gao()

A HUGE HELLO! =]

Beauty

Beauty's a word
With ambiguity
Conjuring images of vivid shades

But beauty to me
Is fluorescent
Shining
From inside of the transparent,
simple box

Inverting people's glances
Simplicity is its choice
But think INSIDE the box
It full of complicated wires and cables
Revealing a high level of sophistication

Look-
How it lights up everyone's faces
Bright with beauty.

Jixin Gao

Discrimination Here's You Come And Go

Discrimination's like a snake
Its teeth in poisoned prejudice,
Causing ache

Discrimination abolished all warmth and spirit
And returned with a new hate
Relishing its pain brought
Never thought of halt

Hey
Discrimination's the new law
Stony and steel and
Square without feelings
Like window frames
Of the Hall
In court

I wonder where the White's Purity all gone.

Tears and Fears
Now the norm
In the name
Of discrimination

now
Gladly Discrimination has gone
Kicked out hard,
square and fair

Yet-
It left a hole
In everyone's hearts.

Jixin Gao

Nature's Sorrow

The soft sandgrains on the beach.
Pressed against my feet.
I feel nature.
I feel its touch,
its warmth.
It covers me like a cocoon,
Like I belong,
To nature too.

But I looked from head to toe-
The extravagant clothes and jewellery
And at-the floating plastics on the sea enjoying a great ride at nature's expense

Do we belong to nature,
Or-
Do they belong to us?

Just at that time,
Nature cried,
Its tears drenching me of remorse.

I cried too,
Hot tears mixing with the cold, acidic rain.
But nature couldn't see me,
Enveloped among the dark clouds,
Crying its heart out.
Yet I hope,
Among the skies,
that it could least feel it.

Jixin Gao