

Poetry Series

mudashiru shittu yomi
- poems -

Publication Date:

2011

Publisher:

Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

mudashiru shittu yomi()

Olympics

Every four years boundaries are broken
Time stand still. The world watches in awe as few select men and women redefine reality.

These are the olympians

This is their stage

this is their time again

mudashiru shittu yomi

What A World

While I am in the office in the morning in Lagos,
Someone, somewhere in London is preparing for work.
A Newyorker is still sleeping
Moscow is preparing for lunch.
We don't all sleep at the same time even when we love each other.
We don't all eat together even when we have vowed.
Life goes on even when after death.
We will not all be together in the next worlds.

mudashiru shittu yomi