Dreaming In The Southern Polar Cap Of Your Thin Arms

You jump with joined feet
You draw a smiley face
You chew sugar free gum

A constant flow of air
Your hair damp and wet
Your opus 27,4
Your cotton pillow cover

You turn the door knob
A vanilla orchid
An orange snowfall in the county
A heart beats only across your chest

You come from the cedar mountain
Your raised eyebrows
As close as possible

Your baptismal font
A holy water
A starry morning.

The First Day Of Your New Life (From Mount Sinai)

Along the path
Red currants of light

The sun through a veil
Sky so clear

Cloud like a hip
In your paper robe

A cup of gold
Near your left wrist

Wavy locks of hair
Smile on her flowery face

Every dawn
A sacred mirror of my life

Three Tulips For The Ultimate Fate Of The Universe

In the door frame
Your spinal column
Your immaculate neck

By nightfall
Your commuter train
Or in an airplane cockpit
An alabaster jar

At the imperial garden
You sit on the autumnal bench
Near a hummingbird

From the cheekbone
To the corners of your mouth

Until the clouds go by
You sigh
A smile
A sweet kiss on my right hand

(Music by Jeff Stonehouse) .
