Sanji Rangsha()

?? Hello, I write poems from my thoughts and feelings — sometimes about life, sometimes about love, and sometimes just what comes to my mind. My words are simple, but they carry what I feel inside

The Shoulder Of Dawn

In the everlasting night, you showed me a light,
When all hope was gone, your shoulder held me tight.
Your love for me is truly incomparable,
And what you've done for me is uncountable.

In Transit

Oh, the burden that I have to carry—
Feels like it'd be better to bury.
This heavy luggage on my shoulder—
With it, I doubt I'll cross the border.

But I know I'm just a passing wanderer,
These portmanteaus I won't carry much longer.
I suffer now, but only in transit—
I won't stay forever; I'm meant to proceed.

My home is far beyond this land,
Where sin can never make a stand.
He waits for me with arms wide open—
And there I'll rest, forever chosen.

Resilience

I may go wrong
When I try to be strong,
But I'll go on.

There might be a heavy storm,
Or sliding of land
On my way to transform -
Still, I will reform.
